Table of Contents

II

180 - 207
United States Counterterrorism on ISIS
ANTON MINARDI // Senior Lecturer at Department of International Relations, Universitas Indonesia.

208 - 239
The Politics of Technocracy in Malaysia (1957-2012)
JASON SEONG WEI LOH // Postgraduate & Research Centre (PGRC), KDU University College, Malaysia.

240 - 265
The Indonesia’s Police Reform Policy in the Reform Era New Institutionalism Perspective
ACHMAD NURMADI, ISNAINI MUALLIDIN, SURYANTO, EKO PRIYO PURNOMO // Faculty of Social and Political Sciences, Universitas Muhammadiyah Yogyakarta, Indonesia.

266 - 287
Local Good Governance Sustainability: Roles of Civil Society in Surakarta City, Indonesia
TEGUH YUWONO // Department of Government Science, Diponegoro University, Semarang, Indonesia.

289 - 309
Mobilizing Resources but Still Mining for Opportunities?: Indigenous Peoples, their Land and the Philippine State
PRINCE ALAN G. VILLANUEVA // Graduate Student, The Department of Political Science, De La Salle University, The Philippines.

310 - 340
The ‘Realness’ Discourse of a Political Leader: A Komunikasi Berasa Perspective
BAMBANG SUKMA WIJAYA // Department of Communication Sciences, Bakrie University, Jakarta, Indonesia.

Editorial

On behalf of the editorial board, we would like to express our gratitude to all authors for their contribution to this issue of Government and Politics. This issue focuses on analysing cross-cutting issues of security and economic policies. In an article entitled “United States Counterterrorism on ISIS”, authors analyse the strategies of the U.S. in fighting against terrorism, including the role of IS in destabilising regions and threatening global security.

In the second article, Jason Seong Wei Loh presents an analysis of the political changes in Malaysia from 1957 to 2012, examining the role of technocracy in policy-making.

The third article by Achmad Nurmandi et al. explores the police reform in Indonesia, examining the institutional changes and their impact on local governance.

In conclusion, this issue provides valuable insights into the complex challenges faced by policymakers in the region, offering readers a deeper understanding of the issues at play.

The editors of Government and Politics.